There are as many ways to swaddle a baby as there are to fold a napkin for a dinner party, but the method outlined here is, in my opinion, the best. I learned it from a midwife many years ago and call it the “DUDU” wrap. (DUDU, pronounced “doo doo,” stands for Down-Up-Down-Up.)

When learning to wrap, practice on a doll or on your baby when he (or she) is calm.

Prepare to start swaddling

1. Place a large square blanket on your bed and position it like a diamond.
2. Fold the top corner down so the top point touches the center of the blanket.
3. Place your baby on the blanket so his neck lays on the top edge.
4. Hold your baby’s right arm down straight at his side. If he resists, be patient. The arm will straighten after just a moment or two of gentle pressure.

Begin the DUDU wrap

An easy way to remember how to do this wrap is to say this little song as you go:

Down…tuck…snug
Up…tuck…snug
Down…a smidgen…hold
Up…across…snug

1. Down. Just as swaddling is the cornerstone of calming, this first DOWN is the cornerstone of swaddling. It must be done well or the wrap will unravel. Hold your baby’s right arm straight against his side, grab the blanket three to four inches from his right shoulder, and pull it very snugly down and across his body. (The blanket should look like half of a V-neck sweater.)

Tuck. Keeping the blanket taut, finish pulling it all the way down and tuck it under his left buttocks and lower back. This anchors the wrap.

Snug. While firmly holding the blanket against his left hip (with your left hand), grab the top edge of the blanket next to his unwrapped left shoulder and tug it very, very snug. Pull the blanket until there is absolutely no slack around your baby’s right arm and the fabric is stretched to the max.

After this first “DOWN…tuck…snug” the baby’s right arm should be held so securely against his side that he can’t bend his arm up, even if you let go of the blanket. Don’t be surprised or lose confidence if your baby suddenly cries louder when you pull the blanket tight. You’re not hurting him!

2. Up. Now, straighten his left arm against his side and bring the bottom corner straight up to cover the arm. The bottom blanket point should reach up and over his left shoulder. It's okay if his legs are bent; that's how babies are positioned in the womb. But, be sure his arms are straight. If they're bent, he'll get out of the wrap as fast as you can say, "Oops, he did it again!" And, he'll cry even more.

Snug. While your left hand still holds his left arm down, use your right hand to grab the blanket three inches from his left shoulder and snug it with a continuous pull (stretch it as much as possible). This removes any slack next to his right arm.

3. Down. Still holding the blanket three inches from his left shoulder, pull the blanket taut and down, but only a smidgen.

A smidgen. This DOWN should bring only a smidgen of fabric over his left shoulder to his upper chest, like the second half of the V-neck sweater. (A mistake parents often make with the DUDU wrap is to bring this down fold all the way to their baby's feet...remember, it's just a smidgen.)

Hold. Using your left hand, hold that small fold of blanket pressed against his breastbone, like you are holding down a ribbon while making a bow.

4. Up. As your left hand holds that fold, grab the last free blanket corner with your right hand and pull it firmly, straight out to your right. This will get every last bit of stretch and slack out of the wrap you've done so far. And, without releasing the tension, lift that corner in one smooth motion, up and...

Across. Bring it tightly across his waist and wrap it around his body like a belt. The belt should go right over his forearms, holding them snugly down against his sides.

Snug. The finishing touch of the DUDU wrap is to snug the "belt" by giving it one last tight pull to remove any slack. Then tuck the end into the blanket as shown in the diagram. This last tight snug and tuck keeps the whole swaddle from popping open.
